55 millions came from public undertakings. State property and 25 millions from the telegraph and telephone services. In 1904-5 taxes increased, in view of the war, to produce 100 millions. Again there was a further addition in the ordinary estimates for the year 1905-6, another 16 millions, public works being estimated to produce 8 millions more, stamps 1 million and taxes 2 millions, but as a matter of fact the imposition of extraordinary special taxes raised 10 millions more, making a total of 74 millions. Therefore we can conclude that the revenue receipts will be at 207 million yen, as provided in the Budget estimate for 1905-6, plus 74 million yen, roughly £37,000,000. To provide for the expenditure in its early days expenses were reduced everywhere: public works were
